

RECREATIONAL LODGING

ARMED FORCES RECREATION CENTERS (AFRCs)

The Army serves as the Department of Defense (DoD) executive agent for Armed Forces Recreation Centers (AFRCs). These joint-service Morale, Welfare and Recreation (MWR) facilities provide quality, wholesome, affordable, family-oriented vacation recreation opportunities to service members, their family members and other authorized patrons (including official travelers) of the total defense force. AFRCs continue to serve as force multipliers by supporting military readiness, retention and well-being objectives.

Situated in the heart of Tokyo, the Sanno Hotel has accommodated U.S. forces since the end of World War II. Originally built in 1932, the Sanno has also served as family apartment quarters, transient billeting for VIPs and senior officers, and a joint senior officers' club. The Sanno opened to all ranks in 1975 and has resided at its current location since 1983, when it was renamed the New Sanno. Formerly operated by the military, leadership was transferred to civilian hospitality professionals in 1990. The government of Japan provides the New Sanno to the U.S. military in accordance with Article II of the United States-Japan Status of Forces Agreement, which was drafted in 1952. With a valid I.D. card, eligible patrons and their guests can stay at any of the 149 rooms offered in the hotel. The New Sanno completed a $20 million renovation in 2005.
